Trinkets, Treasures, and Tokens

Like a child at its first circus-we collect, cherish our mementos from Butler. . .

multi-colored pledge ribbons, bookstore purchases, empty wine bottles, fraternity $t$-shirts, football programs, ticket stubs, and a wilted bouquet of roses . . .

Republican buttons, Democrat banners, poverty paperbacks, Snoopy cartoons, Olympic posters, economic statistics, and a Shakespearean quote . . .

C-club conferences, creative personalities, social awareness, lifelong friends, educational stability, graduation degrees, and a reason why.

Spring fever hits

week-end crowd

Sunshine, live music, and housing competition brought Butler students to the Irwin Mall for Spring Weekend 1976 Friday's dance with Providence and The Mason Brothers started the weekend-long celebration. Students donned summer garb, tossed frisbees and drank beer while they enjoyed the on-stage performances.

The Saturday highlights included competition in egg tossing, sack racing, softball throwing, and banana eating. John McCrum of Sigma Nu was crowned Mr. Butler and Kappa Kappa Gamma junior Karen Hungerford was awarded "Bulldog Look Alike.

Saturday night, a capacity crowd boogied to the music of The Ebony Rhythm Funk Campaign in the Mall tent.

After performances by Tom Chapin, Malachi, and The Late Show, the weekend festival closed with the crowning of Alpha Chi Debbie Ward as Miss Butler.

Schwitzer Hall

wins singles

Schwitzer Hall women won their second straight Spring Sing trophy in the singles division with a medley of songs from "Guys and Dolls" in the annual YM-YWCA event.

The doubles competition was won by the women of Kappa Kappa Gamma and the men of Delta Tau Delta singing a Liza Minelli hit medley. It was the second year the Kappas teamed for the doubles trophy. The Kappas also won the Spirit Award given for selling the most tickets.

The Clowes Hall crowd not only enjoyed the winning performances but enthusiastically applauded other presentatons including a George Gershwin medley, a medley from the Broadway hit musical "Raisin," and a Beach Boys medley.

Seniors receive degrees, awards

Outstanding students were presented awards throughout the Spring as the final semester drew to a close for over 300 undergraduates.

The Matrix Table Banquet sponsored by the Women in Communications and the Student Recognition Banquet rewarded students for their high level of achievement. Seniors Gregory Landry and Brooke Roberts were named "Most Outstanding Students of 1976 " by a student and faculty poll.

Butler's 121 st annual commencement ceremony May 23 concluded years of study as degrees were conferred to 348 Butler graduates.

Freshmen adjust to campus life

New students arriving at BU began their college lives with a week jammed with activities. Moving into a new home away from home, meeting and making new friends, exploring a new environment, the campus, and adjusting to a new meal style all occupied freshmen for the first days of orientation week.

Meetings with advisors for scheduling took up afternoons as freshmen began the tedious registration process. Finally, the climax of the week came as forms piled up in front of new students as they wandered the basement of Jordan Hall picking up class cards and arranging and rearranging schedules. Pictures were taken for ID's and the new Butlerites headed home to rest for the onset of classes in their first semester at college.

Greek rush week entices pledges

The seven Butler sororities and eight fraternities pledged over 260 members during formal rush week as Butler Greek life began a new year.

The newly inducted Greek women were honored at the annual Panhellenic Banquet held in Atherton Center on Sept. 8.

The Freshman Skits followed two weeks later, Sept. 23, sponsored for the first time by Chimes. The freshmen women of Kappa Kappa Gamma won the first place trophy with a presentation of "The Problems of Deciding on a Skit."

Lambda Chis

 sponsor BustWhile most Butler students relaxed during the summer months, the men of Lambda Chi Alpha began planning for the annual Watermelon Bust.

Bust, the first all campus festivity of the year, began after the Evansville-Butler football game with an estimated 900 person crowd in attendance.

A record of 27 feet 11 inches was set in the seed spitting contest as the day's events got under way. Other events included the melon toss, melon distance throw and the watermelon eating race, in which freshman Denise Fredericks, Theta, smashed the nine year Pi Phi dominance of that event.

The climax of the day's events came with the crowning of Tri Delt, Jeani Rumple, as Miss Watermelon Bust and the campus dance sponsored by Lambda Chi that night.

Backwoods fun dominates day

Kappa Sig Sadie Hawkins Day turned the Irwin Library field into a portion of the back mountain woods.

The tug-of-war and cider chugging returned to the festival again this year as did the kissing contest which moved from last year's back seat of a convertible to the hay filled back of a pick-up truck this year.

A new event, the skillet throw, saw women flexing their muscles as a 12 inch iron skillet was launched into the air for distances of over 30 feet.

Cindy Russ named

Fall Fest queen

The second annual TKE Fall Festival, Sept. 18, returned old favorites in competition and new events for campus clownery.

Returning contests included the pie eating and egg-in-the-mouth relay. New contests included a bicycle relay and a log sawing contest.

TKE men allowed themselves to be the target in a dunk tank and provided a sledge hammer and car for people to release frustrations. They also grilled corn on the cob and hot dogs for the campus crowd.

Cindy Russ received the Fall Fest Queen crown. That evening the TKE's sponsored an all-campus dance to close Fall Festival 1976.

Sigs raise $$ 1000$ for United Way

WNAP radio personality Don Michael Gerard hosted the annual Sigma Chi Derby Day which collected a record $$ 1000$ this year for the United Way and provided a fun afternoon for Butler students.

Sigma Chis decked in red derbies spent the day running from vicious females collecting the head pieces for their houses. Kappa Alpha Theta women collected a winning 65 out of the 180 derbies.

New events, a milk chugging from a baby bottle contest and the search through a bucket of whipped cream for a hardboiled egg, joined the old favorites such as pyramid building, skin the snake and Dec-a-Sig contest.

The afternoon was climaxed by the crowning of the 1976 Derby Day queen, Theta Tracy Horst.

Alumni return for Homecoming

Cold weather settled on the Butler campus as students and alumni gathered for new and old events during Homecoming Weekend 1976.

The new and old came together Friday afternoon with the annual Raft Race in Holcomb Pond followed by the new ice cream eating contest sponsored by Baskin-Robbins.

Saturday morning, Sigma Nu recorded their fourth consecutive pushmobile victory and then pulled past the Phi Delts for victory in the annual chariot race. The Phi Psis won the tug-of-war and then pulled the alumni team through the mud to celebrate.

Love: pizza style wins 1976 stunts

In the world of make-believe, a pizza-styled love affair reigned supreme as the 1976 Geneva Stunts, sponsored by the Intercollegiate YMCA, displayed the talents of campus inhabitants.
The combination of the Phi Psis and Tri Delts produced the winning Stunts performance, "Saucy Dreams".

Second place performance was given by last year's winning team, Schwitzer and Ross, who satirized Greek mythology with the lyrics from present day television. Schwitzer and Ross also won for the second year the Dr. P. Locke Award of Originality.

Alpha Chi Omega and Sigma Nu won third place honors in the performance contest, and the women of Kappa Kappa Gamma repeated as the winners of the Spirit award for selling the most tickets to the show.

Commuters free of restrictions

Over 900 students attend classes but do not live on campus. These students, tagged as commuters, have chosen to move away from restricted campus life and set out on their own, either in an apartment, home, half-house, or other form of dwelling.

Living off-campus presents both problems and solutions to the student. The student gains privacy, quiet and freedom from the rules that are so despised on campus. Inclement weather, finding a place to park, and a detachment from campus activities are not so pleasant.

The off-campus situation presents the real world of meal planning, food shopping, paying bills, and coping with landlords to the student.

Diamondmen slide to $15-25$ record

After a horrendous start of seven consecutive losses, Butler's baseball squad compiled a 15-25 record for the 1976 season.

Led by the offensive prowess of outfielder Steve Mitchell, designated hitter Harry Muta, and all-conference catcher Bob Latty, the Bulldogs were competative, despite their somewhat misleading record.

The mound trio of Don Quale, Harry Muta and Rob Hoen handled most of the pitching chores and were the vic-

Trackers sprint to second in ICC

Combining the strengths of several veteran distance runners and dynamic shotput and discus duo, Coach Stan Lyons guided Butler's track team to a fine 4-1 dual meet record and an impressive second place finish in the ICC meet.

Senior phenom John Kesler not only captured the ICC and Little State titles, but also qualified for the NCAA finals. Lou Garrison was victorious in the conference 6 mile race, while Dave Waterfill won the same event in the Little State meet.

In the field events, Butler boasted two conference and Little State champions in shotputter Andy Dick and discus record holder Rob Goshert.

The men of Tau Kappa Epsilon boosted their lead in the all-sports trophy race when they ran away with the intramural track championship last Spring. Scoring an overwhelming 50 points in the competition, the TKEs smothered the Delts and Sigma Chis, who finished second and third respectively.

Led by singles champion Mark Bearby, the Sig's rebounded to capture the IM tennis title along with Bearby's stellar performance. Sigma Chi's doubles team finished second to the Delt's and racked up enough points to win the overall trophy. The Delts finished a close second and three teams were deadlocked for third place.

ICC grid string snapped at four

Butler's string of four consecutive ICC football titles was interrupted last fall as the Dogs slipped to a 5-5 season record.

Led by quarterback Bill Lynch, who was named the ICC's MVP for the third successive year, the Bulldogs never quite got untracked after losing a heartbreaker, 31-28 to Evansville in the season's opening game.

Kevin McDevitt became only the second running back in Butler history to gain over 1,000 yards rushing in a season, and Bruce Ford was named the team's most valuable lineman. Place kicker Bob Ligda set several conference records during the campaign, including a 57 yard field goal against St. Joseph.

Swimmers flounder to early losses

Butler's swimmers suffered through three early season defeats and toted a $0-3$ record at the time of publication.

The squad was also hindered by a two week layoff when the pool was closed in lieu of the energy crisis due to extremely cold weather.

Junior John Towler, sophomore Tommy Joe Frye, and freshman John Prittie all showed great promise for the future with brilliant early season performances.

Lynch closes out brilliant career

Throughout the annals of Butler sports history, few athletes have had the impact on the athletic program that Bill Lynch has had the past few years.

Following serious knee surgery during his sophomore year, Lynch rebounded to become the ICC's most valuable player for three consecutive years on the gridiron, and doubled as a mainstay on the Bulldog basketball squad. Lynch also concluded the 1975 football season by leading the nation in pass completion percentage.

Along with his wealth of athletic plaudits, Lynch is an outstanding student and has been a member of the Dean's List every semester during his Butler career.

'Dogs rebound from slow start

Butler's basketball squad got off to a sluggish start this season and possessed an 8-9 record at the time of publication.

Coach Theofanis' troops were led by senior mainstays John Dunn, Wayne Burris, and Bill Lynch along with a promising crop of underclassmen.

Butler Ballet celebrates 1976

During the 1976 year the Butler Dance Department spent many long hours preparing and performing presentations both on and off the Butler campus.

On March 26 and 27 the Bicentennial Ballets were performed at Clowes Hall. Dance students also participated in the Bernstein "Mass" on February 20 and 21 along with "The Last of the Mohicans", a romantic ballet production, in April.

Preceding the Christmas holidays "The Sleeping Beauty" Ballet was performed by the Butler Ballet with the Indianapolis Symphony Orchestra. The production at Clowes Hall was staged by George Verdak and William Glen.

Favorite stars appear on Clowes Hall stage

by Barb Scherer

Clowes Memorial Hall of Butler University. An abiding monument to many of the finer things that make life beautiful. The structure is considered one of the most flexible multi-purpose halls outside the world's major centers. Constructed of Indiana limestone special emphasis was placed on creating a superb environment for the audience, the best possible conditions for the performer.

Clowes was built in memory of Dr. George Henry Alexander Clowes, research director of Eli Lilly Company and noted scientist. The idea of a multi-purpose hall to serve the Indianapolis Symphony Orchestra, Butler University, and the public as a center of culture and entertainment was conceived by Dr. Clowes.

From the "gala formal opening" on October 18, 1963, to the present, Clowes Hall has attracted a diverse series of shows. The policy of Clowes Hall management has been this: to bring audiences what they asked fortop "popular" stars of television, screen, stage, and radio fame. Through the years featured stars have included: Henry Mancini, José Feliciano, Debbie Reynolds, Van Cliburn, Barry Manilow, Ella Fitzgerald, Bill Cosby, Maurice Chevalier, Judy Garland, Bob Hope, Harry Belafonte, Barbra Streisand, Julie Harris, Robert Goulet . . . the list goes on.

A widely varied program of bookings has characterized the seasons at Clowes. Forms of entertainment range from classical to popular; there are shows for any taste, for any age. If the preference is classical a night at the symphony would be in order. Clowes Hall is the designated home of the Indianapolis Symphony Orchestra. Recent musicals include: Godspell, Pippen, and Promises, Promises. Specials at Clowes have been Mark Twain Tonight, Preservation Jazz Hall, Chinese Acrobats, "Give 'Em Hell, Harry", and Tenth Anniversary Celebration with Arthur Fiedler. Popular music has come to Clowes during the years through the Beach Boys, Judy Collins, John Denver, Seals and Crofts, Simon and Garfunkel, and the Wright Brothers Overland Stage Company.

Butler University students enjoy a discount privilege on all tickets enabling a visit to Clowes Hall to be an affordable luxury.

Butler honors Bernstein music

Combined talents and perseverence of 800 musicians including virtually all departments of Jordan College of Music and many Indianapolis orchestras, choirs, and bands, joined together to launch a five-day festival of the music, theater, and dance of Leonard Bernstein at Clowes in February, 1976

Leonard Bernstein made a special appearance at Butler University before the opening of the festival to critique the final rehearsals of his acclaimed "Mass" which highlighted "Festival 76," as well as to receive honors from Butler University's President, Dr. Alexander Jones.

The Opera Department closed the festival which was produced as Jordan College's salute to the Bicentennial with Bernstein's opera, "Trouble in Tahiti."

Lily productions overload room 160

Butler University's Drama Department began its second semester 1976 season with Lillian Hellman's play "The Autumn Garden." Set in a summer resort town in Louisiana immediately after World War II, the play portrayed the autumn years of life and unrealized dreams of youth.
"Once in a Lifetime," a Hart-Kaufman comedy, was the department's second production. The play revolves about two C-circuit vaudevillian actors in 1927, who when faced with the threat of losing their jobs at the arrival of talking motion pictures, flee to Hollywood and open a school of elocution. Through a series of favorable blunders, the two nab top positions in a movie studio.

Both plays were presented as the Drama Department's Bicentennial recognition of American playwrights.

Dramatic plays highlight season

The fall semester Butler Drama productions consisted of "Antigone", a Greek tragedy by Sophocles and "The Birthday Party" by Harold Pinter.
"Antigone" was presented October 7-10 in Lilly Hall and was directed by Bernard Wurger. Leading roles were played by Carrie Mack, Mary Lynn Barth, Gilbert Heir, Paul Hays, and Lisa Doran.
"The Birthday Party" directed by Daniel W. Pugh featured Thomas Riggen, Rebecca Hoff, Stephen Brent, Elizabeth Goerss, Stuart Shafran and Joseph Marley in the November 11-14 production.

Combined talents enhance Festival

The ninth annual Romantic Music Festival which included six concerts of neglected Romantic music for soloists, choruses, orchestras, and ballet opened on Tuesday, April 20 and continued through Sunday, April 25 in Clowes Hall.

The Festival music which is unfamiliar today salutes great artists such as Buck, Chadwick, Herbert, Hoffman, Loeffler, Paine, and Schelling as well as our nation's 200th birthday celebration.

Special name artists, the full Indianapolis Symphony Orchestra, and dancers, singers, and instrumentalists from the Jordan College of Music combined their talents under the direction of Dr. Frank Cooper to provide an historical, entertaining week of unknown musical scores.

Students advise local businesses

Preparing students for the outside world was the prime concern of the School of Business this year with many courses geared toward real-life business situations.

In one course, students actually consult and advise owners and operators of small businesses in the Indianapolis area by discussing with these businesses their problems and possible solutions. Another course offers computer programming for solving various business problems.

Faculty members in the Business School teach an evening graduate course of about 480 persons from 200 different area companies, discussing theoretical approaches to problems. These graduate students then put the approaches into practice in their own businesses, reporting back the next class session. The faculty members in turn report to the day undergraduate business students the results.

Society for the Advancement of Management continued to provide coffee and donuts to the evening students to earn money to attend the Senior SAM and the annual national conventions.

Journalism students again participated in a three-day-aweek class, in which they published the evening paper, "Nitelites." The Collegian and Drift offered other avenues for journalistic participation.

Future teachers tutor pupils

Students of the Education college gained experience being both competent and compassionate, while helping the community before they become teachers.

The reading center gave students an opportunity to help more than 200 Indianapolis children with their reading difficulties. Students tested, diagnosed and tutored these children, using the skills they learned from nationally known experts who spoke about, demonstrated and discussed the problem of Dyslexia, a reading ailment.

Another special clinic designed to help both the graduate and the undergraduate students and the community was the special education centers. These two clinics, one in the Jordan Hall basement and one on the Cold Spring campus, opened their doors to more than 100 special children.

Education students again put the skills and knowledge learned in the classroom to work trying to help the exceptional children of Central Indiana. Several programs were offered for these children: Children's University, Fifth Experience, Challenge, Windspray, and Tutorial.

History majors tour Soviet Union

Students in the College of Liberal Arts & Sciences learned through study and experience.

Ten graduate and undergraduate history and political science majors traveled to the Soviet Union over Christmas vacation. They toured the Kremlin, Red Square, Moscow and Lenningrad. The tour, sponsored by the Soviet Youth Travel Bureau, was highlighted by meetings with Soviet students.

Back home in Indiana, a Women in Politics seminar explored the world of the State Legislature, featuring both men and women from the General Assembly discussing problems of politics.

New courses were offered to Liberal Arts students. Contemporary United States, World Since 1945, Introduction to International Politics, and Environmental Law helped majors become even more aware of the world around them.

The Liberal Arts program offered students an internship program, where they spent 3 to 12 hours a week in outside positions. These positions included law offices, government agencies, museums, and historical societies.

Future pharmacists tour Lilly

Renovation of the Radiopharmaceuticals and the Pharmacy Technology Laboratories and of the Pharmacy Student Lounge helped create a brighter, more modern environment for Butler's future pharmacists.

A two-day tour of the pharmaceutical research and production facilities of Eli Lilly & Co. in Indianapolis provided a valuable learning experience for fourth year pharmacy students. Fourth and fifth year students traveled to Detroit, Michigan to tour the Parke-Davis Co.

Externship continued for fifth year students who spent one semester in a hospital and one in a community pharmacy. The students served in a structured program under the supervision of a pharmacy precepter of 20 to 25 hours per week.

Lily Hall offers diverse majors

This year Butler's Jordan College of Music presented Indianapolis with both Sleeping Beauty and Jimmy Carter.

The radio department, WAJC-FM, declared to Indianapolis that James Earl Carter would be the next president of the United States while providing special election coverage.

On the other side of the spectrum, the dance department presented the ballet "Sleeping Beauty" to music performed by the Indianapolis Symphony Orchestra. The department also presented a winter dance performance, gave a Romantic Festival performance of the ballet "Raymonda" and hosted the Rosenblith Dance Competition.

The drama department presented performances of Sophocles' "Antigone" and George Kleinsinger's musical "Archie and Mehitebel," originally the Broadway play "Shinbone Alley."

Butler's Symphonic bands and the Symphony Orchestra took on an international flavor this year with guest conductors as Fisher Tull, Izler Solomon, Antoni Wit (of the Bygodoscz, Poland Symphony Orchestra), Igor Buketoff and Victor Borge.

Holcomb plans Butler Observatory

By John Wharton

"Write us a feature about the Observatory for the yearbook," Vickie Sanders asked me in November.

For most writers this would have been a piese of cake. Just gather some assorted facts-when it was built, how much, etc. -and any writer would have been able to dash off a story within days.

Bu't telling the 22-year tale of the J. I. Holcomb Observatory & Planetarium has not proved to be an easy task for me. This study is not the end product of a rough first or even second draft, but is the eleventh version, two months late, of an "easy assignment" turned personal nightmare. I am violating a time-honored journalistic rule of anonymity by relating this story to you personally. But telling about the Observatory is a very personal thing, because we go back a long way, the Observatory and $I$. The idea of a major observatory for Butler was conceived in the mind of Indianapolis industrialist and then president of the school's Board of Trustees, James Irving. Holcomb in the early 1950's. His idea gave birth to the Observatory on a small grassy knoll at the tip of the campus' main mall in the summer of 1953. Two years and half a million dollars later the infant building opened its doors to a host of local dignitaries when it was dedicated as "the graceful but efficient means whereby for years-perhaps for centuriesyoung and old alike can satisfy their thirst for knowledge of our universe."

James Irving Holcomb was not even an amateur astronomer and, in fact, when he first decided to donate the funds for a new building on campus, he envisioned a married housing dorm on the low hillside. But Holcomb was a man of vision-the early fifties marked the modern rebirth of astronomy and the space age was just around the corner-and, despite the fact that tiny Butler then offered but one course in astronomy, he decided that Butler was to have a major observatory.

Holcomb always seemed to do things in a big way. A glance at the Holcomb Research Institute or the Holcomb Carillon shows this somewhat. But the absolute proof of this in the four-story Observatory. For this building was one of the nation's first astronomical facilities designed for the whole community, the first to incorporate a sky-simulating planetarium (the 30th built of the now existing 862 in America) and a major telescope.

There is a story of when Holcomb went to the factory of the company that was to build the telescope, a good-sized 24 -inch wide instrument that had already been ordered. During a tour of the factory, Holcomb stopped next to a large 38 -inch wide piece of glass. With a mirrored surface applied, he was told by his guide, this would give somebody the 10 th most powerful telescope in the nation. "Has this telescope been ordered yet?" Holcomb asked. "No," said the plant official, ushering Holcomb off to see Butler's already-started telescope. "Well, it has been now. I want it," Holcomb replied.

At the time of its installation, Butler's 38 -inch telescope was the 10th largest telescope in America, and today it is still ranked in the top 40 , as well as being one of the 100 largest telescopes in the world.

It was this telescope which nurtured my own love for space and the stars. Alan Shepard had just become the first American rocketed into space, and I, like countless other children across the country, suddenly decided I wanted to be an astronaut. To satisfy my new-found love for the stars, my mother brought me to Holcomb Observatory. But, halfway up the long winding staircase, some 30 feet above the lobby floor, my fear of heights got the better of my desire to be shot into space. Thankfully, my mother dragged me the rest of the way to join the 80 other people waiting to glimpse through the massive instrument.

My first look through any telescope revealed a large magestic image of Saturn, soft wispy bands wrapping around an off-white disc and thin rings circling a body I could not believe was ten times the Earth's size. It was a humbling moment I shall never forget-a moment when part of my consciousness joined the stars.

I regularly went back to Holcomb Observatory for several years after that, my own personal love for the stars growing each time. But, at the same time, my interest in mathematics, the "language" of astronomy wained, and after a while I stopped going to the Observatory all together.

Unfortunately, as my interest in the Observatory lagged, so apparently did Butler University's.

In 1965, three years after the outdated first planetarium star projector was replaced by a vastly more complex (and costly) instrument, the bottom fell out at Holcomb Observatory. Within one year the Observatory's budget was cut in half and paid admissions to the planetarium shows of $50 $$ per person, the only means of extra income, were discontinued.
The following years took their toll on the Observatory. More and more planetariums were built in area school systems and school group attendance dropped sharply. New inovations were introduced in the planetarium industry to enhance programs. They were available to Holcomb's planetarium, but there simply wasn't enough money. This lack of funds led, by the end of the sixties, to a deterioration in the condition of the building, the planetarium, and the giant telescope. By 1969 several sensitive drives in the planetarium instrument began to fail, the building's basement was leaking as was the dome over the telescope, and that dome was jammed shut.

But it was the telescope which suffered most during these years of low funds and apparent apathy. For fifteen years Indianapolis' polluted skies had eaten away much of the reflective surface on the giant telescope mirror, severely cutting down its light gathering power. Putting a new surface on the crippled mirror would entail $$ 2,000$, money the Observatory just didn't have.

Today some of these problems have been cleared up. In the past six years the building has undergone something of a facelift-badly needed new paint, a few new auxiliary projectors in the planetarium, and some repairs to the main star projector. But several painful facts remain. The complex planetarium instrument has not been overhauled since it was installed in 1962. There just isn't enough money; the Observatory's budget is still roughly the same now as it was when it was cut back in 1965. And the telescope, still one of the largest in the nation, is still crippled.

These are facts not readily known by the people who visit Holcomb Observatory these days. Indeed, since 1965, attendance has dropped badly, from 22,000 visitors that year to just over 9,000 last year. People still stand in awe beneath the giant telescope and still marvel at the recreation of the nighttime sky in the planetarium. But one overhears occasionally-"This telescope image looks pretty fuzzy,"or"We were at __ High School's planetaruim last month and they could.

This is painful to me, not just because I've spent a great deal of my Butler career in that towering building as a student staff member, not just because fow come by anymore as I did years ago to get a feel for the stars I bold so dear, not just because most Butler students never enter the place or worse yet, never know of it; it is painful to me because the men who guide Butler University, 22 years after similar men proudly dedicated the Observatory as an educational and sultural prize for the community, seem to have now forsaken it. Those words spoken just 22 years ago now ring bittersweet

If you read this yearbook as an underclasman or as a departing senior, take some time to go over and experience one of the truly significant features of the place you now call or have called "bome." Take some time to reflect on the J.I. Holcomb Observatory.

Living quarters label students

By Vickie Sanders

Whether your bumper sticker reads: Alpha Phi, Phi Delta Theta, or GDI, it symbolizes your role as a college student. At Butler, as well as most universities, the housing unit determines the person and their personality.

Housing units become the basis for entrance into campus-sponsored events and acceptance into many social organizations.

Individualism suffers as faces and names are identified with buildings. Mary Jane Brown becomes Mary the Zeta and Ralph W. Smith is tagged as that Smith guy from Williams Hall.

The Greek alphabet becomes as familiar with campus dwellers as primary numerals are with faithful Sesame Street fans. Neon lights and painted rocks boldly present these Greek letters.

Links between student and residence are further impressed by the exhibition of clothing and jewelry. Recently at Butler Schwitzer residents joined in this ceremonial draping with their "classiest chicks on campus" Tshirts. Everywhere students are seen wearing clothing (shorts, hats, even gym socks) announcing their place of habitation. Strange, no one ever considered wearing a 100 Main Street shirt when living at home.

Labels such as rings, charms, and, of course, pins are also flaunted. Yes, who can overlook the traditional moonlight pinnings.

Freshmen are scanned for prospective fraternity members the first week of school. With approval by individual houses, freshmen become pledges, a transitory period of floor-mopping, kitchen duty, and study table. Survival of this phase and more difficult phase, aptly named Hell Week, leads the young man to formal initiation where he receives his badge of courage, the fraternity pin.

However, the saga of the pin does not end here. When Mr. Fraternité meets and falls passionately in love with Connie Coed, he turns over his ownership of the pin to her. An act triggering two major events; a candlelight and laking. Candlelights consist of Connie's friends in the sorority house or dorm corridor gathering together in the dark to sing sentimental lyrics and pass around a lighted candle. Of course the news is kept secret until the candle comes to Connie and she coquettishly blows the flame out. All leap forward with tears in their eyes to congratulate her.

Meanwhile Mr. Fraternité also must endure the ritual of laking, whereby his brothers disrobe him and toss him in the closest body of water.

Mascots, serenades, compositesall add to the symbolistic display by college housing units. Yet as absurd as these procedures seem, campus housing provides a compatible place of living for many.
There are several reasons students are content with sororities, fraternities, and dormitories. Affiliation with such units is often viewed as step-ping-stone to business, others want to experience the college stories Mom and Dad have told, and most important is the human trait of needing to belong.

Perhaps Herman Veragodoy, a sociology professor at the University of Florida, said it best. "We all have a need to belong to and participate in exclusive, intensive associations in closed groups just as we need to engage in mass activities and intimate family relationships. Campus housing fulfills this need; we'd go crazy without them."

Schwitzer active in campus events

Schwitzer Hall added several achievements to their records this year. by placing first in the single division of Spring Sing, second in Geneva Stunts with a first place trophy for originality, and first in the women's division of the Alumni Telethon.

The 300 residents also donated money to the firemen's fund for Christmas toys and collected clothing for the Indiana Girls School.

And now I must find the words somehow, somewhere to close a large portion of my college life. I'm relieved; yet sad. It's difficult to leave friends and memories.

All my gratitude to a wonderful staff. All my love to those who gave me confidence.
